LIVESTREAM PRODUCER

Number of Openings: 2

The Pixel Project is looking for 1 – 2 women to join our all-female team of moderators and producers who run our Read For Pixels and Fathers For Pixels livestream series.

You should be strongly supportive of women's human rights and our mission to end violence against women. Being a geeky book and pop culture lover with a sense of humour would be a plus.

The producer's duties include:

- Moderating comments in the YouTube chatbox during the livestream session, including recognising and kicking out trolls and bullies.
- Curating relevant questions from the audience to relay to the moderator/presenter to read out to the livestream guest(s).
- Being on standby to take over the moderator/presenter's role should the moderator/presenter run into tech issues or other emergencies.
- Run practice sessions with guests in advance of the live sessions if needed.

Skill Requirements:

The prospective producer should ideally have the following skills and experiences:

- Using and managing a livestream app such as StreamYard.
- Moderating live online audiences on YouTube
- A fast reader as producers are expected to read at least some of the books by our author guests as part of preparing for the Read For Pixels livestream events.
- Communicates well with team members using tools such as e-mail, WhatsApp, and Signal for communication.
- Reliable and good at keeping to deadlines
- Able to work with a virtual team across several time zones.
- Bonus: experience hosting/presenting a livestream show.

Note: We prefer someone with experience but can also provide training and orientation.

Volunteer Time:

Prospective producers should be available on weekends during our livestream series periods:

- Mid-February – End of March.
- June

- Mid-August – Mid-October

As our livestream sessions are held at 10.30am Eastern Time, 8.30pm Eastern Time, and 6.00pm Pacific Time to accommodate guests from around the world, this role will best suit volunteers in the following time zones:

- North American time zones – Pacific, Mountain, Central, Eastern
- Southeast Asia/Western Australia time zone
