IN-HOUSE RESEARCHER

Number of Openings: 2

The Pixel Project is looking for 1 – 2 people to join our research team that provides research support for our campaigns and programmes including tracking down and compile relevant information.

You should be strongly supportive of women's human rights and our mission to end violence against women.

The Researcher's duties include:

- Tracking down information needed by our writing team for our articles and pages.
- Doing due diligence on people and organisations as part of our campaign and partnership preparations.
- Compiling and organising information in the form of databases (spreadsheets on Google Docs)
- Tracking down information to add to existing databases.

Skill Requirements:

The prospective in-house researcher should have the following skills and experiences:

- Excellent online research skills – able to track down relevant information, studies, people etc accurately and thoroughly according to specific briefs
- Proficient with Google Docs
- Proficient with Word and Excel
- Reliable and excellent at meeting deadlines
- Communicates well with team members using tools such as e-mail, WhatsApp, and Signal for communication.
- Able to work with a virtual team across several time zones.

Volunteer Time:

This position requires an average of 2 - 5 hours per week and may vary as there are busy periods and quiet periods.

All researchers are generally provided with very reasonable deadlines and are left to organise their own time. However, there may very occasionally be briefs which may require tight deadlines should there be urgent requests for assistance from victims etc.
