IN-HOUSE WRITER

Number of Openings: 2

The Pixel Project is looking for 1 – 2 people to join our writing team that works on our annual “16 For 16” blog campaign as well as ad-hoc articles throughout the year.

You should be strongly supportive of women’s human rights and our mission to end violence against women.

All applicants must submit a portfolio of their published articles and writing samples.

The In-House Writer’s duties include:

- Writing assigned articles for our “16 For 16” campaign as the solo writer.
- Co-writing assigned articles for our “16 For 16” campaign with other in-house writers.
- Assisting with proof-reading articles by other in-house writers
- Doing research including sourcing news, studies, visuals, and other information needed for assigned articles

Skill Requirements:

The prospective in-house writer should have the following skills and experiences:

- Excellent writing skills in English
- Experience in writing well-researched articles about topical issues (e.g. women’s human rights, healthcare, current affairs etc)
- Excellent online research skills – able to track down relevant information, studies etc as part of preparation for writing an article.
- Reliable and excellent at meeting deadlines
- Communicates well with team members using tools such as e-mail, WhatsApp, and Signal for communication.
- Able to work with a virtual team across several time zones.

Volunteer Time:

This position requires an average of 2 - 7 hours per week and may vary as there are busy periods and quiet periods.

All in-house writers are generally provided with very long lead times for deadlines and are left to organise their own time. However, there may very occasionally be ad-hoc pieces which may require tight deadlines in line with breaking news about significant cases or events.
